

apartments.com™ more under one roof

- Enter City -
- Select a State -
- Enter Zip -

apartments.commence your search.
clickhere

View all stories by date

SPECIAL REPORTS

- Terror on the Tracks
- Cold Cases

All Special Reports

MULTIMEDIA

All Multimedia

NEWS

SPORTS

BUSINESS

OPINION & COMMENTARY

LIVING

Entertainment

Fanfare

Food & Drink

Home and Garden

Family

Coping with Kids

Dog Talk

Kids List

Fashion and

Shopping

Fine Arts

Events

Top Living

Summer Tours

Movies

PITTSBURGH TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Back to headlines

Larger text Smaller text

A new life after retirement

By Kellie B. Gormly

TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Tuesday, August 1, 2006

Dora Lee Rosenfeld, a retired interior designer, recently found her highest career calling -- making jewelry -- and is pursuing it at age 73.

"This is really me. This is like my soul mate. This is what I'm supposed to do," says Rosenfeld, a Penn Hills resident, who is pouring her energy into her new craft and business despite arthritis. "I really feel like it will take off if I work hard.

"There's just something about making the jewelry. ... It makes my heart go bling!" she says.

Rosenfeld -- who makes jewelry primarily out of big, flashy rocks and has started selling it on www.getyourrockson.com -- is one of many folks who find, at least vocationally, that life actually can begin at retirement. Whether they open a new store, pursue independent freelance work or turn a hobby into a sales venture, people can start new careers after retirement that usually are more enjoyable than their previous life careers.

- ADVERTISEMENT -

Surveys conducted by AARP indicate that more people

Top Stories

Local Sports

- Rendell confirms arena deal
- Mayor: City got 'fair deal'
- Plan to block Pens move is moot
- Staal becoming top defensive forward
- Back spasms bother Penguins' Laraque
- Tracy pleased with spring training progress
- Chavez impresses Pirates brass
- Pitt women earn 1st NCAA invite

Read All Local Sports

Music
TV & Radio
Books
Travel
Video Games
Columnists

OBITUARIES

TODAY IN HISTORY

CENSUS

ABOUT US

Help Desk
Contact Us
Frank L. Craig,
Editor
Robert Fryer,
Managing Editor
Joe Chudicek,
Multimedia Editor

CUSTOMIZED RSS NEWS FEEDS

What is RSS?
Staff Blogs
Newspapers in Education
AP Podcasts

WEEKLY TOP TRAVEL DEALS

Deals released on March 7- Limited Time Offers!

Weekend flights to Las Vegas	$103*
Last minute Travel Packages	$199*
Domestic flights under $200*	Save
Europe flight spring savings	$399*
Family Getaway Vacations	$420*
Last-minute Cruises from 75% OFF!	Save
FREE kids fare to Disneyland	Save
More Deals...

 beakingbuddy®

Washington, D.C. And about a third of self-employed people begin their businesses after age 50.

Part of the reasons for post-retirement ventures, Rix says, is the increase in life expectancy, which leaves people wondering, "What am I going to do for 30 years?" Older people today also are healthier and better educated than their predecessors, she says, and they have the opportunity to pursue interests that they didn't have time for earlier in life.

"They don't want to do nothing, at least initially," Rix says.

Robert Daley of Peters, Washington County, says the word "retire" isn't in his vocabulary -- and besides, he never has been much into fishing or golfing, which are common male retirement activities. The former corporate finance executive, who often worked 80-hour weeks, now works 35 to 40 hours a week as an independent investment adviser with Ohio Township-based Allegheny Investments.

"At this point, I'm basically my own boss," says Daley, 65. "I like to do things. ... I like being active, I like working with people, and I like finance."

Many retirees, such as Rosenfeld, are able to transform a creative hobby into a business, and they are able to enjoy thoroughly the work without worrying about finances as much as they did when they were younger. Patricia Hutchison of Harrison, a former culinary arts teacher who retired in 2001, opened a home-based business in March called Patch's Doll Designs. She sews doll clothes and her husband, Ernie, makes doll furniture. The couple have been selling their creations at festivals and through word of mouth, and they are working on launching a Web site.

today expect to work in their retirement than the workers of previous generations. As many as half of retirees-to-be begin transitioning into some type of other employment or business before they fully retire, whether for financial or other reasons, says Sara Rix, policy adviser for the AARP headquarters in

Multimedia

 Slideshows |  Videos
 Audios | Super Bowl XL

National News

- Corps placed faulty pumps in New Orleans
- NYC livid over attack on woman, 101
- Months after Rita, body found in home

Read All National News

National Sports

- Brown, Niagara win NCAA play-in game
- Penguins to get new Igloo in Pittsburgh
- Dice-K gyros his way into spotlight

Read All National Sports

Obituaries

- Nobel Peace Prize-nominated monk dies
- 1950's musicals star Betty Hutton dies
- Autopsy results pending on Richard Jeni
- Obituaries in the news

Read All Obituaries

Strange

- Colo. couple find faceless dollar coin
- Police: Dad hides stash in girl's pocket
- Trucker wants name to be

"I really loved my job, but let's face it -- nobody wants to have a rigorous schedule," says Hutchison, 60. "With doing this, I'm still having fun, but the schedule is my schedule, and our time is our time. ... This feels more like fun than work."

Patrick Lynch of Economy, Beaver County, turned a stained glass hobby into a business he opened with a partner last October -- "Techa Mantu," which deals stained glass and picture frames. But that's only the beginning: Lynch, 62, says he hopes to start programs that help people switch careers, and overcome drug and alcohol dependency, also through his business.

"It's an opportunity for me to use some of my creative gifts," says Lynch, a former Department of Defense intelligence specialist. "I'm the kind of person that likes to be able to take ideas for a product or a piece of art from conception to completion."

Kellie B. Gormly can be reached at kgormly@tribweb.com or (412) 320-7824.

Back to headlines

Ynot Bubba

Read All Strange

Living

- Tori Spelling, husband welcome baby boy
- Family says Jeni committed suicide
- Mills ready for 'Dancing With the Stars'

Read All Top Living

Other Sections

- Top 25 College Basketball
- NBA
- NASCAR
- Extreme Weather
- Read All Technology
- World
- Today in History

Tools

 Print this article

 E-mail this article

 Subscribe to this paper

 Larger text | Smaller text

Today's Most-Read Articles

- Developer pushes for luxury condos in Mt. Lebanon
- Kansas City deals with arena deal
- Rendell confirms arena deal
- Sources: Pittsburgh arena deal done
- Pens' Staal becoming top defensive forward health care

Today's Most-Sent Articles

- Rendell confirms arena deal
- Sources: Pittsburgh arena deal done
- Murrysville bar owner convicted in tax case
- EF senior gets \$100K surprise
- Area executives sign on for value-driven

Click here for advertising information || List all Advertisers

Protect Your Privacy!

Download pictures and movies safely.
FREE 15-day trial of PrivacyView

PITTSBURGH'S PARTY TEES

The burgh's own River City Shirts, get Big Ben's Party T-Shirt !

Reproduction or reuse prohibited without written consent from Tribune-Review Publishing Co.